The University of King's College's Contemporary Studies Program invites applications for a part-time instructor who would be responsible for teaching the following course:

CTMP 4200.03 cross-listing HSTC4200.03 Philosophies of Technology: Techne to Technology

What does it mean to live in a "technological society"? In a certain sense, technology forms the very ground of what it means to be "modern". We moderns are technological beings. This course will explore the various responses to technology, from the ancient notion of "techné and the tangled engagements of Western and non-Western visions of technology, to Enlightenment and Post-Enlightenment critiques of the machine, alienation and the technological sublime in Karl Marx and Martin Heidegger. Contemporary engagements with technology will finish off the class.

The class will be offered on-line as an Asynchronous Session with the possibility of a Synchronous tutorial, Winter term (January-April 2021).

The successful candidate will be responsible for conducting online classes and discussions, evaluating assignments, attending staff meetings, and holding online office hours. If eligible, the candidate may be required to supervise a teaching assistant. This position reports to the Director of the Program.

Qualifications and Experience:

Applicants should possess, as a minimum requirement, a master's degree in interdisciplinary studies or a relevant discipline or field of research. Prior experience teaching at the University level is a strong asset.

Pay Rate: Remuneration is based upon qualifications and experience

To apply: Applicants must submit a cover letter stating their qualifications for, and interest in, teaching the class, a curriculum vitae, two confidential letters of reference and evidence of teaching effectiveness by Thursday, November 12 to:

Posted by Contemporary Studies Program, University of King's College on May 13, 2019 in Job Postings
POSTING DATE: May 10, 2019
APPLICATION DEADLINE: August 1, 2019

PAY RATE: Remuneration is based upon qualifications and experience.

WORK ASSIGNMENT: The Contemporary Studies Program invites applications from qualified individuals to teach the following course:

CTMP 2115.03 The Idea of Race in Philosophy, Literature, and Art
What is race? How does racism impact our sense of self and the communities in which we live? The first part of this class examines the emergence of the modern idea of race, in relation to European expansionism, philosophical ideas of the time, and the development of science. The second part of the class focuses on contemporary conceptions of race and their relations to culture, history, ideology, science, and everyday lived experience. We consider contemporary debates on race and racism in the works of thinkers, writers, artists, and social activists, reflecting on the concept of white privilege and on the intersections of race, class, and gender.

The class will be offered Tuesday & Thursday, 4:05-5:25 p.m., winter term.

The successful candidate will be responsible for teaching 3 hours of classes per week, evaluating assignments, attending staff meetings, and holding office hours. If eligible, the candidate may be required to supervise a teaching assistant. This position reports to the Director of the Program.

QUALIFICATIONS

Applicants should possess, as a minimum requirement, a Master's degree in interdisciplinary studies or a relevant discipline or field of research. Some expertise in critical race theory will be an asset. Prior experience teaching at the university level is required.

Applicants must submit a cover letter stating their qualifications for,

Part-time Academic Posting - Department of Philosophy

Posted by Department of Philosophy on November 4, 2015 in Human Resources

POSTING DATE November 4, 2015

APPLICATION DEADLINE: November 18, 2015

DEPARTMENT: Department of Philosophy

PAY RATE: As per CUPE Collective Agreement

TIMING: To teach Winter 2016 (blended class delivery)

Class number: Philosophy 3106

Class name: Animal Ethics

Class time: Blended Delivery:

Tuesday 11:00-12:30 (Truro campus)

Thursday: 11:30-1:00 (Dalhousie campus).

Plus on-line delivery

JOB SUMMARY: This is a blended class; lectures will be given both on-line, as well as in-class. The Part-Time Academic's duties involve full responsibility for the class including but not limited to: lecture to students on-line, be available to students two hours per week outside of class times for student consultation, develop course outlines, prepare and grade assignments, tests and exams.

The instructor is expected to create a blended course with recorded online lectures, and to travel to Truro once a week in the winter.

QUALIFICATIONS/EXPERIENCE: Ph.D. or ABD (Philosophy) and teaching and research experience are required to be considered for the job. The teaching and research experiences will be assessed with respect to their quality and to how closely they relate to the subject matter of the course. Evidence of teaching effectiveness and research experience is required. Research experience shall include at least one of the following: graduate classes taken in the subject matter of the course, graduate theses written in the subject matter of the course, publications or presentations on topics falling within the subject matter of the course.

The successful candidate must be able to teach on both the Halifax campus in the Dalhousie Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences and the Truro campus in the Dalhousie Faculty of Agriculture. The successful candidate should also have experience in class design and/or teaching and/or researching on issues in animal ethics as they arise in the agri-business. Experience with on-line delivery is an asset.

Please apply in writing by the application deadline. Your application shall include an up-to-date c.v. and supporting evidence, e.g. course evaluations, graduate transcripts and course descriptions, information on any courses you have taught in philosophy, sample of publications in the area, etc. Please apply to:

University of King's College

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada B3H 2A1

POSTING DATE: July 27, 2015

APPLICATION DEADLINE: August 17, 2015

PAY RATE: Remuneration is based upon qualifications and experience.

WORK ASSIGNMENT: The Contemporary Studies Programme invites applications from qualified individuals to teach the following courses:

CTMP2121.03 Structuralism and Poststructuralism. Structuralism was one of the major intellectual movements of the 20th century, and its legacy continues. This class will introduce students to the work of structuralist thinkers such as Ferdinand de Saussure, Claude Levi-Strauss, Louis Althusser, and Jacques Lacan. Their work addresses the deep structures of signs, language, political economy, cultural production, and the psyche. Structuralism had some surprising effects, such as the French protests of May 1968, when the "students took to the streets." We will consider the way poststructuralist thinkers, such as Barthes, Foucault, Deleuze, and Derrida criticize and transform structuralist interpretations of subjectivity, language and the political.

The course is scheduled for Wednesdays, 9:35-11:25 a.m. and Fridays, 10:35-11:25 a.m. during the Winter term.

CTMP3410.03 Community in Crisis: Philosophy, Literature and Film. Community is often proposed in modernity as the solution to politics of division and isolation. Yet the concept of community is itself plagued by paradox and inconsistency, even as it proposes itself as inclusive and harmonious. It is no exaggeration to say that politics today revolves around a re-entrenched notion of 'the proper,' that is, around questions of property and capitalist accumulation, competing claims of belonging and membership, and versions of propriety determined by socially or religiously 'conservative' resurgences. Against the backdrop of these re-entrenchments, this class will begin by considering the theoretical tradition out of which the link between political community and the proper emerges. Further, we will situate that tradition in relation to the ways in which the issue of community has, with some urgency, re-emerged as a principle theme in contemporary philosophy, literature, and film.

This course is scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursday, 4:05-5:25 p.m. during the Fall term.5+

The successful candidates will be responsible for teaching 3 hours of classes per week, evaluating assignments, attending staff meetings, and holding office hours. If eligible, the candidates may be required to supervise a teaching assistant. These positions report to the Director of the Programme.

QUALIFICATIONS

Applicants should possess, as a minimum requirement, a Master's degree in interdisciplinary studies or a relevant discipline or field of research. Some prior university-level teaching is required.

Applicants must submit a cover letter stating their qualifications for, and interest in, teaching the class, a curriculum vitae, two confidential letters of reference and evidence of teaching effectiveness.

If you are interested, please submit your application and supporting documents in writing no later than August 17th to:
